

Tumbling Jude

Jude has questions for her father – lots of questions. And now is the time for some answers. But will it mean leaving her family to fend for themselves for a while . . .

Following the death of her beloved mother, Jude felt the alarming sensation of being in free fall. Her life was a shambles and she was tumbling. Geoffrey was under a lot of pressure lately in work and they had become distant. Their children, Oscar and Flora, were nearly grown up and had their own lives while her mother-in-law Mrs. Larchet, a cold and distant woman, lost no opportunity to belittle her.

Now, as the ferry pulls into the Greek Island of Ios, Jude hopes that her father will want to see her here after all this time. He left when she was just a baby so why would he want to see her here now? But the news her father has for her is not what she expects. And when Marguerite, the exotic Nigerian artist who shares Liam Maybury's life, tries to explain his unhappiness and his secret desire Jude feels angry. But if she is to make any sense of her own crumbling life she may have to learn to accept some harsh truths that will change her life forever.
